

The government does not have a right to be looking at what I do on the internet based upon loose allegations or their whimsy. Especially given the gag order they can issue to my ISP. It should take considerable evidence for a wiretap to occur in the first place, and gag orders should be totally out of the question. They are my records and I have a right to know if someone has been snooping through them.